As you may have seen in the news, on Tuesday, January 22, Denver Public School's teachers' union was unable to reach an agreement with the district and voted to go on strike. While the district and union continue to negotiate to reach a solution, there is a chance that DPS teachers will strike on Monday, January 28th. We will continue to watch developments between the district, union, and state.

Regardless, we wanted to ensure that our families knew that while we serve a large population of students from Denver Public Schools, we are NOT a DPS charter school. High Point Academy is an independent charter authorized by the Charter School Institute. That said, HPA is not involved and our school will remain open and our programming will continue.

As an educational institution our focus is always on students and their success. And, we know that without bright, caring, passionate teachers our students do not succeed. At High Point, we continuously look for ways to support our teachers, to ensure solid compensation packages, to provide opportunities for growth, so that we can attract and retain high quality teachers. Our goal is to show our teachers how much we value them, as professionals and as human beings. Yet, we are faced with similar budget constraints from the state and we understand the complexity of the situation DPS now faces.

We know that DPS values their teachers, just as we do, and we hope that their hard work to reach an agreement will conclude before the strike. We hope that teachers will be able to continue their important work in their classrooms alongside their students.

As with many difficult conversations, if we are open to hearing the perspective of others, we learn ways to be better for one another. We hope that the conversation between DPS and Denver teacher's union, extends beyond their community and that collectively we can grow and find ways to ensure that we are fairly compensating our educators and our educational institutions.

As a state, we must continue to encourage our local and state officials to increase the total amount the government invests in education. We must continue to advocate for K-12 education so that all of our students receive the quality education they deserve.

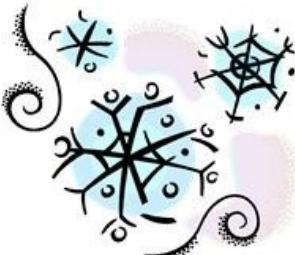

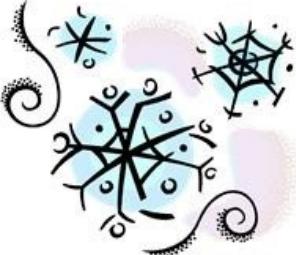

If you have any questions about the strike, or any topics regarding educational funding, please reach out to me by email, phone, or stop by my office. Thank you for your continued support of our teachers and our school.

With husky pride,

Keri Melmed

Executive Director/Principal
